Canada's New Death Penalty

How is it that Canada is once again sentencing people to death? What other reforms has no one told you about? With over 40 years experience, lawyer Mary Campbell has been a senior policy and legislative advisor through the good, the bad, and the ugly. She will highlight some of the key recent sentencing and corrections reforms in Canada.

Jennifer Oades Sunday, November 18th, 2018 @ 12:30
Chair Parole Board of Canada

Beyond the Headlines

This presentation will challenge us to look beyond the media headlines, to gain a better understanding of the work of the Parole Board of Canada, and to explore better ways for the conditional release of offenders into our communities. Jennifer Oades has for over 25 years been working in corrections in Canada. She was appointed Chair of the Parole Board of Canada in January 2018.

Canada's Federal Prisons: What needs to be fixed

Drawing on his 30 years of service in Canada's federal prisons, Robert will offer an honest and clear view of how we treat those incarcerated in our prisons — how prison staff perform their duties and how prisoners learn to survive in this environment. His career spanned a wide range of leadership roles in a number of CSC institutions, serving latterly as the Deputy Warden of the Kingston Penitentiary. Robert is the author of Down Inside: Thirty Years in Canada's Prison Service.

The Politics of Criminal Justice Reform

This presentation will touch upon the challenges in effecting criminal justice reform in our new social media world, where politicians are informed by tweets rather than Law Commission reports. The instant opinion formation in social media is posing a huge potential impediment to informed evidence-based decision-making in criminal law reform. Marie Henein is a senior partner at the law firm of Henein Hutchison LLP.
